Farmyard Friends Visit: Students Welcome Special Animal Guests to School

Reception had a very exciting visit from the animals at White Post Farm. Farmer Chris and Farmer Lucy bought lots of animals for the children to stroke and feel. The children learnt interesting facts about the animals, such as their favourite food and favourite things to do. "I loved seeing the guinea pigs and the rabbits, it was really fun to give them a stroke!" Said Evelyn.

Animals which are nearly extinct

The sun isn't always shining everywhere in the world. For example, the Siberian tiger is one of the endangered species in the world. Facing a significant decline in population, there are only about 400 individuals remaining.

Another species facing extinction is the Sumatran Orangutan with only 14,000 left on the island of Sumatra, Indonesia.

The northern white rhino is also functionally extinct as there are only 2 females left in the whole world. Raising awareness to deforestation will hopefully support the animals while they are left with us! If you could support recycling at home you might be able to help these amazing creatures before it's too late!

Graffiti Gallery

Year 4 had an artist come in and create graffiti with us. All of year 4 spray painted a piece of paper, then used art pens to write their names. Year 4 were able to ask lots of questions to the artist - their favourite fact was that he'd been inspired by magazines.

Stone Age weapons:

Stone Age weapons were primarily crafted from Stone, antler and wood. They evolved from simple, hand held tools into sophisticated, specialised projectiles, cutting and smashing tools. Key weapons included hand axes, spears, arrows and knives often created through flint knapping to produce sharp edges from the flint, obsidian or quartz.

EYFS take an exciting trip....

EYFS took a trip to Brazil as part of their new enquiry, 'How do people express themselves? where they will be learning about Brazil, the Amazon Rainforest and Romero Britto. All the children made their own passports and then were given a ticket before boarding the plane, "it was so good when we went on the flight to Brazil, we even got our own ticket!" When the children landed in Brazil, they found various objects in a suitcase, including a Brazilian flag and coffee beans. "It was so fun to smell the coffee beans, they even smelt like real coffee!"
